SANTI'S CLAUSE

BAD girls! We can't get enough of them. Check out cheeky cover girl Clare "Chk-Chk Boom" Werbeloff, who last year dominated headlines with her "fully sick" but totally fabricated account of a Kings Cross shooting. After you've finished staring at our exclusive shoot on page 54, flip back to Hollywood minx Lindsay Lohan's shock blood-and-gum pics on page eight. There's also "Mafia Princess" Marisa Merico spilling her Godfather dad's secrets on page 34, and Colombian supermodel "Cocaine

Clare bares: Our favourite Aussie troublemaker with some bloke

Queen" Angie Sanlemente on page 40. If that's not enough, our Vampire Babes Behaving Badly will really put the bite on you! Enjoy another fine issue.

EVERYONE knows your face from your "fully sick" joke in Kings Cross, but tell us about the real Clare.

I'm a typical Northern Beaches [of Sydney] girl. I love going out with my girlfriends, hanging out with my boy mates and chilling with my boyfriend. I'm very laidback and like to have a good time, because you only live once. What were you like growing up?

Most of my work in high school was done by other people. I always tried to make my family laugh. I guess I'm a born entertainer. This is your first mens' mag shoot. How did you feel?

I was nervous, but once we sorted out the outfits and poses, I was happy and everyone made me feel really comfortable. It's huge for me because I've never been a cover girl before.

Why did you decide to do it?

I got to choose my own clothes and work with an amazing photographer to decide how we shot things. I wanted to stand out and be classy as well as sexy. I'm really happy with how it turned out. I didn't know I had a sexy side to me like this.

Let's talk about the "chk-chk boom" incident. It's been more than a year. What actually happened that night?

I was at [music venue] the Metro with a girlfriend, and I got a bit sick so she put me in a taxi. I called another friend, who was in Kings

Cross, and we were going to meet up and share a cab home. My taxi driver could only get half way up William Street [the main road into Kings Cross], because it was all closed off. So I walked the rest of the way and met my friend. Then I saw the cameraman, jumped in front of him and said I'd seen the whole thing. Then we went home.

How'd you come up with your spiel?

At the beginning of the footage, you can see me think it through a bit. But it was all just babble, really. I didn't know the next word that was going to come out – it just kept rolling out.

What about the "chk-chk boom" bit?

I'd never said it before. It just came out, like the rest of the story.

Did the cops talk to you afterwards?

Later in the week they did, but they knew it was obviously made up.

What was it like to wake up and be on the news?

I was just so blown away when I saw myself on TV. I had no idea the interview was even going to be aired. I'd completely forgotten that I'd even done it, so you can imagine my shock in the morning.

Were you surprised the media fell for the whole thing?

Definitely. I kept waiting for the cameraman to tell me to shut up. You'd think they'd have more important things to do than make such a big deal out of it. I didn't think it would be taken seriously!

What did your family think?

Mum was overwhelmed. She thought it was really bad at first,

"MY WHOLE LIFE HAS BEEN TURNED UPSIDE DOWN"

because of the shooting stuff, but once she realised I didn't mean anything by it, and I didn't see anything and wasn't even there, she was fine.

What were your mates' reactions?

It was all pretty much the same. My friends know who I am and how I go about things and it was so clearly a joke to those who know me.

It must have been an intense time.

That week was such a blur. I was put up in a hotel right next to Kings Cross by Channel Nine. I invited my friends and it was pretty much a party week. We'd go down and get something to eat and I'd get spotted. It was just really weird.

What's the worst thing someone's said to you?

That I'm a racist. That's one of the big ones. I'm certainly not.

Do you defend yourself?

I've defended and justified myself enough. If people have already passed judgement, I'm not going to try to change their minds. My friends and family know who I am and that's all that matters.

Casin

CLARE WEE

Have you received any threats?

I've gotten a few baseless threats, like stuff on Facebook, but I haven't taken any of them seriously.

What do you usually get up to on the weekends?

The girls and I love to go into the city, hang out and talk. We're just normal girls. With the boys, it's more drinking and having barbecues down by the beach.

What's your poison?

If I'm out with the girls, wine. But if I'm up for a big one, it's vodka and apple juice. I don't drink beer.

What do you look for in a dude?

Sex appeal, cleanliness and not wearing girls' jeans. If I can't even fit into them, then you shouldn't be wearing them. He should be really caring and nice – but not too nice.

"EVERY AUSTRALIAN HAS A BIT OF BOGAN"

What says "sex appeal" to you?

It's definitely a vibe. A guy has to be confident and sure of himself. A sense of humour is a big thing for me.

Where's a good place to take you on a date?

Manly Grill for a delicious steak and some cocktails.

What's changed for you these days?

Everything. My whole life has been turned upside down. I was waitressing before the TV interview and had just finished my real estate degree. I was lost and didn't know what to do. Now I'm really happy.

I've been given this opportunity and have been put on this path instead of being forced to find it.

What are the best and the worst things about the incident?

Career-wise, it put me in the direction I really want to go. The worst thing is that it was an actual shooting and someone did get hurt.

Would you do it again?

Yes, I would.

Do you still go out in Kings Cross?

I haven't been out there since, but it's still one of my favourite places to go on the weekends. I don't think I'll ever be off the Cross.

What's the weirdest Clare Werbeloff merch you've seen?

Dog pyjamas with my quotes on them. I sold the boots I wore on the night to a random guy for $2000. They were $5 Vinnies boots, so I didn't really mind.

You're co-hosting a new show on Nine called The Real Hustle. What's it all about?

It's a show about hustles, scams and cons that go on around the world. There's myself, a conman and an illusionist/magician. There are hidden cameras in public, and we show how people get scammed and, hopefully, teach the public how not to be scammed in the future.

Are you hoping to move into acting?

I'd love to pursue presenting, and Getaway is all that's on my mind. I'm working really hard towards that.

What do you do to stay in shape?

I'm a junk food queen. We're packing the house up at the moment to move, so the only exercise I do is packing boxes and walking up and down the stairs to get something from the fridge. I walk my dogs, too.

"I DIDN'T KNOW I HAD A SEXY SIDE TO ME LIKE THIS"

What's your favourite junk food?

At the moment it's cola-flavoured Mentos and Chinese food.

This shoot has a Las Vegas vibe.

Are you a casino person?

I used to love the RSL. My friend and I went through this phase of going there every day, when we weren't working. We'd go and play virtual roulette and get to know the locals. I enjoy the odd gamble here and there and two-up on Anzac Day is good fun.

Red or black? Heads or tails?

Black. Tails.

What about glam or trackies?

I'm definitely a trackies girl. Like I said, I didn't know I had a sexy side to me, so it's good to know I can be both.

Would you say you have a bit of bogan to you?

I think every Australian has a bit of bogan in them. We all know where we come from and there's nothing wrong with that.

Dan Steiner
